

CHARLES EVANS HUGHES IS REPUBLICAN NOMINEE FOR PRESIDENT, FAIRBANKS HIS RUNNING MATE; ROOSEVELT PROGRESSIVES' CHOICE

SUPREME COURT JUSTICE IS CHOSEN BY REPUBLICANS ON FIRST BALLOT OF THE DAY, AND THIRD OF CONVENTION

COMPROMISE WITH LODGE AS NOMINEE IS NOT ACTED ON

On First Ballot of the Day the New Yorker is an Easy Winner.

FAVORITE SON BOOM'S COLLAPSE

Votes Thus Released Are Strong to Hughes; Progressives Nominate the Colonel by Acclamation; Compromise Not Favored by Either Party.

By Associated Press.

COLISEUM, CHICAGO, June 10.—Charles Evans Hughes of New York was nominated for President by the Republican national convention on the third ballot today. The vote was practically unanimous. He received 49 1/2 votes, Roosevelt 18 1/2, duPont 5, Weeks 3 and Lodge 1. One was absent.

Before the roll call had covered half the states, Hughes had the necessary 485. New Jersey touched the mark. The chair asked if the nomination should be made unanimous and A. P. Moore made the motion. The chair then recognized Senator Lodge, who seconded the motion and made an eloquent appeal for Hughes.

John W. Wainwright then placed C. W. Fairbanks in nomination for Vice President and Nebraska presented the name of former Senator Burton. Ohio decided not to present Theodore Burton. This practically assured Fairbanks' nomination.

Charles W. Fairbanks was nominated for Vice President.

COLISEUM, CHICAGO, June 10.—Republican national convention was late getting down to business today. Its conference committee having been in session with the conference of the Progressive convention during the greater part of the morning with recurring rumors that some agreement would be reached before either convention began balloting.

The weary delegates, enthusiastic at the prospect that this would be the last day of the convention, put in the time discussing possibilities down at the Auditorium and reading news bulletins. The overnight switch of some of the favorite sons' delegates filled the Hughes men with exultation and they came in early, confident of nominating their man on the first ballot today, the third of the convention, and sure they would do it on the next; but some of them said a fourth ballot would be necessary.

While the convention was assembling John McGrath, Colonel Roosevelt's secretary, arrived on the platform and talked with some of the leaders. Not many of them had arrived, however, and McGrath waited. Chairman Harding said this of McGrath's visit:

"We are going to get together." At the same time it became known that all who voted for Fairbanks for President had been released except the Indiana delegation, which would cast one more ballot for their favorite son.

The New York delegation conferred on the floor on the way in which they should withdraw Roosevelt's name and discuss their Vice Presidential preference. It is said the bulk of them will go to Hughes.

The Ohio delegation, with one possible exception, will vote for Hughes. Chairman Harding let the gavel fall and the convention was in order at 11:39. Dr. Levi concluded his prayer and the chair recognized Senator Smoot to present the peace conference.

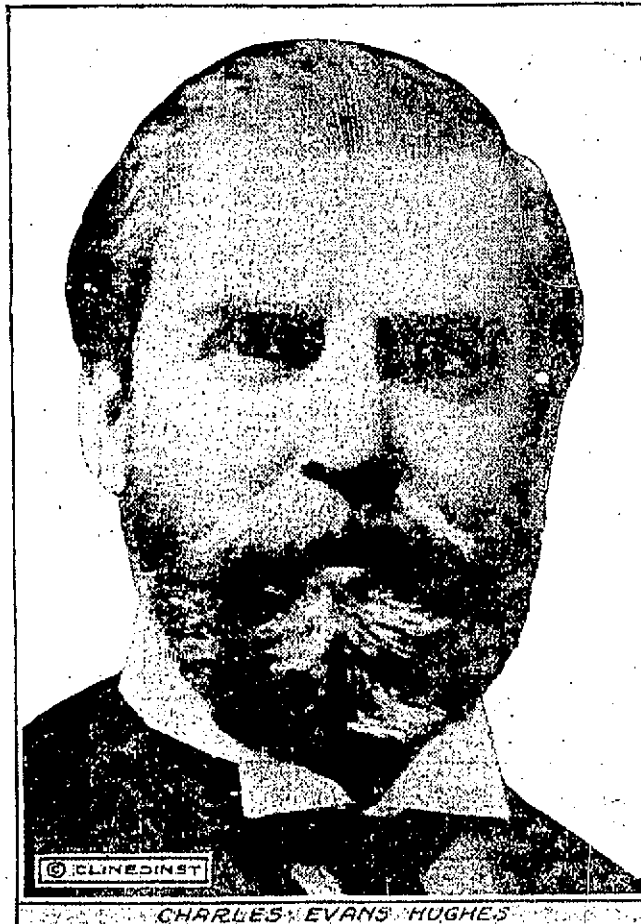

He announced that the Progressive members of the peace committee had presented to the Progressive convention for consideration the name of Justice Hughes. Cheers followed.

Mr. Smoot then read Colonel Roosevelt's letter to the Progressive convention explaining that it had been brought to the Coliseum by Mr. McGrath since the peace conference met. The reading was followed with closest attention. When Mr. Roosevelt's suggestion of Senator Lodge as a compromise candidate was received there was applause, but only Massachusetts rose.

FAVORITE SONS QUIT

CHICAGO, June 10.—Senator Weeks of Massachusetts released his delegates. In the balloting yesterday Weeks had 105 votes.

The announcement of Senator Weeks' withdrawal followed closely on the news that Sherman had re-

CHARLES EVANS HUGHES

Charles Evans Hughes was born in Glens Falls, N. Y., on April 11, 1862, and was educated at Colgate and Brown universities and Columbia Law school. He was admitted to the New York bar in 1884 and practiced until 1906, although the Republican nomination for mayor of New York city had been offered to him in 1905. He declined the nomination. He had also lectured in the Cornell University Law school and New York Law school. Mr. Hughes came prominently before the public of America in 1905 and 1906, when he served as counsel for the legislative investigating committee which exposed the abuses in the life insurance business. He resigned the office of governor of New York in October, 1910, to become an associate justice of the United States Supreme Court by appointment of President Taft.

He resigned his delegates. The decision of the weeks and Sherman leaders to abandon their candidates and in the case of Illinois to support Justice Hughes became known early and had a potential influence in deciding the course of the followers of other favorite son candidates.

Senator Weeks announced without hesitation that he would no longer continue the fight and when pressed for a statement said simply that he had informed his supporters that while he greatly appreciated their loyalty, he desired now that they would cast their ballots for some other candidate.

A large part of the Massachusetts delegates indicated they would stay with Weeks until the end, but it is understood that his supporters from other states generally will be for Justice Hughes.

No one would undertake to speak specifically for Senator Fairbanks' followers, but it is quite well understood that they would no longer press the senator's candidacy. Involved in this case is the question of the Vice Presidency and even the senatorial race in Indiana. Two senators are to be elected in that state, this year and in whatever the Indiana delegation does it will have regard to this fact. The leaders, therefore are anxious that the former Vice President should be again asked to allow his name to be used for this office, believing that with him on the national ticket the election of two Republican senators from the Hoosier state would be practically assured. At last accounts they had received nothing from him or his closest friends indicating that he would accept the nomination for second place.

"Under the circumstances we have just got to have him and we'll make him late if he won't," said one of the Indiana delegates. Senator Burton's adherents are disposed to go down with him, but they are slow in getting out this morning, but the men holding secondary positions expressed this opinion with decision. They declare that Ohio is not easily influenced by appearances and say that at any rate nothing is to be gained by a change at this time.

Before the time set for the Republican convention it seemed probable that most of the New York delegates who have cast their votes for Senator Root will continue their allegiance to the end. The Sherman following is expected to go almost solidly to Hughes and most of the Connecticut delegates, especially outside of Iowa, will follow in this direction.

THE EARLY BALLOTS.

CHICAGO, June 10.—Charles Evans Hughes, associate justice of the United States Supreme Court, has the lead for the Republican Presidential nomination.

STATE DELEGATION IS FOR KNOX; GOVERNOR BOOSTS T. R.

Brumbaugh Withdraws After Getting 29 Votes on First Ballot and Makes Speech for Colonel.

CHICAGO, June 10.—On the two ballots taken last night in the Republican national convention, Philadelphia G. Knox of Pittsburgh led in the vote of the Pennsylvania delegation, receiving 27 on the first and 33 on the second ballot. Governor Martin G. Brumbaugh withdrew his name after receiving 29 votes on the first roll call, and urged his friends to turn to Theodore Roosevelt. Fifteen of the delegates, including himself, followed the governor's advice.

Pennsylvania divided her votes as follows: P. C. Knox, 36; Martin G. Brumbaugh, 29; Theodore Roosevelt, 8; Charles E. Hughes, 2; not voting, 1—total, 76.

When the result of the first ballot had been announced, Chairman Harding recognized Governor Brumbaugh. The governor mounted a chair in the Pennsylvania delegation and said:

"I want to thank my friends for their support of myself and to withdraw my name. At the same time I want to ask why, since we have adopted such a fine platform, we don't nominate a man who fits that platform."

"Why don't we nominate Theodore Roosevelt, who is revered at home and feared abroad?"

The governor's statement was cheered. The votes of McNichol and Brown who live in the congressional district in which Senator Penrose resides in Philadelphia, were cast for Roosevelt. On the first of the Senator, Crow, delegate from this district, voted for Knox. Isaiah Good of Somerset voted for Brumbaugh. On the second ballot both voted for Knox.

The Pennsylvania delegation divided as follows on the second ballot: Knox, 36; Roosevelt, 23; Hughes, 3; John Wainwright, 5; DuPont, 2; Root, 1; absent, 1. Total, 76.

11:11 A. M. to report the action of the conference committee.

The decision of the convention, Mr. Perkins said, was of vital import to the country.

A long telegram received this morning from Colonel Roosevelt to the Progressive conference was then read by Secretary Davis, who said a copy had been sent to the Republican conference.

Colonel Roosevelt recited how the Republicans had asked for a second choice selection from the Progressives.

"For months I have thought of this matter," Colonel Roosevelt said, declaring it was imperative to sink "all minor differences" and reach a common ground if possible. He recited the telegram sent to former Senator Jackson. The telegram reiterated the "appeal" to the Progressives and Republican conventions.

"I ask you, members of the Progressive convention, to make those words good by deeds," Colonel Roosevelt said.

Chairman Perkins was greeted with a demonstration of approval when he said, "I may have done well or may have done poorly," in the conference. His statement that Colonel Roosevelt may be acting well or unwisely was received in silence.

Governor Johnson did not come to the platform with the other delegates. He occupied a seat in the extreme rear of the hall with the California delegates.

When Mr. Perkins concluded by urging the convention to abide by Colonel Roosevelt's request and defer action until the latter convention passed on the suggestion of Senator Lodge as a compromise candidate, the delegates acquiesced with shouts of "That's right, that's right."

Captain John M. Parker of New Orleans, addressed the convention in behalf of those who "had burned their bridges behind them" when they joined the Progressive party four years ago. He opposed any compromise that would sidetrack Colonel Roosevelt. He every sentence was cheered.

"This is a permanent party," shouted Parker. Similar sentiments were expressed by him at the state chairman's conference and he did not attend the morning peace conference's meeting. He has been talked of for the Vice Presidential nomination. When the demonstration following Captain Parker's address had been silenced the platform was formally adopted without roll call.

DEFICIT OF $70.70 SHOWN IN REPORTS FOR CLEANUP DAY

Big Bill for Team Hire Gives Jolt to Members of Health Board.

ONE DISTRICT MAKES MONEY

Combined Districts 2 and 4 Show Receipts $2.90 in Excess of Expenses; Health Officer's Report Shows Few Contagious Diseases Exist Now.

Reports of the Cleanup Day conducted by the Board of Health on May 10, as submitted at a meeting yesterday, show that the expenses were $70.70 more than the receipts. Council will be asked to draw an order for this amount. Inasmuch as the city was ready to finance the project to the extent of $200, council gets off rather easy.

The reports of receipts and expenses for the various districts did not balance with the money turned in and the statement of expenses as compiled by members of the board. This was largely due to the fact that a bill for $68 for teams was rendered by Bernard O'Connor, whereas the members understood they were to have the teams free and pay for the drivers' services. In making up the reports the board members did not take into account this charge for team hire, consequently the comparatively small deficit jumped to $70.70 following the receipt of a bill for $68 from Mr. O'Connor.

In Dr. Uts' district, comprising West Side, the expenses were $12 and the receipts $38.45; districts 2 and 4, in charge of Gould Hyatt and G. E. Albrecht, showed receipts of $45.80 and expenses of $43, a profit of $2.80; the third district, where Alderman S. H. Howard was in charge, collected $28 and expended the same amount; district 5, in charge of Dr. T. R. Francis, collected $12.30 and spent $40.

That this plan of a Cleanup Day can be made self-sustaining or even yield a profit for the board was evidenced by the report from the combined districts 2 and 4 where a surplus of $2.90 was shown. Health Officer George Hetzel and Gould Hyatt were largely responsible for the good work there. A good many things were secured this year which will be of assistance next year.

The report of Health Officer George Hetzel for April and May showed a gradual lessening of the number of contagious diseases. In April there were 29 cases of measles and in May only 10. There were three cases of scarlet fever in each month. One case of typhoid was reported in May. April's report also showed two cases of chicken pox, one of diphtheria, and one of erysipelas.

The report also showed that eight outside closets had been connected with the sewer last month.

Members present were Dr. C. W. Uts, Dr. T. R. Francis and S. H. Howard.

HUGHES IS SILENT

Promises Statement Later as to Whether He Will Accept.

By Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Justice Hughes was told of his nomination for President by newspapermen at his home where he had been at work all during the Republican convention on decisions to be handed down Monday, probably his last day as an associate justice of the Supreme Court.

He received the news without evident emotion, saying, "I have nothing to say at this time, but will make a statement later in the day."

Half an hour before the convention voted, telegrams began to pour into the Hughes residence predicting the nomination and extending congratulations. The Justice had retired to the living room leaving a small array of newspapers in possession of his office. Only his secretary, L. H. Green, saw the reporters during the morning.

Miss Katherine Hughes spent the day with a tutor coaching her in preparation for entering college next fall. Elizabeth was busy about the house with the usual cares of a girl of nine.

"Tears stood in Justice Hughes' eyes as he came down to meet the newspapermen. His voice quavered, but by the time he had been asked for a statement he had regained his composure and announced he would have one at 3 o'clock."

CITY PROPOSES TO ENFORCE THE FIRE LIMIT ORDINANCE

With Added Fire Equipment Insurance Rates May Be Lowered if Regulations are Observed.

"A crusade to compel observance of the ordinance forbidding the erection of frame buildings within the fire limits is to be undertaken by the city authorities. A number of persons who have had such structures erected either in defiance or ignorance of the provisions of the law, have opened themselves to fines ranging from $25 to $100 and the expense of tearing down the offending buildings.

Instances are on record where residents have built frame garages, stairways and other additions inside the fire limits. Some have never inquired as to whether they were violating the ordinance; others have gone ahead and finished the buildings after inquiring and finding out that their plans were in conflict with the law. Wherever possible the Department of Public Safety compels such building operations to stop, but there are instances where the law was violated and the city authorities knew nothing about it. Prosecutions are to be entered in the near future.

The fire limits originally set by the city are such that several frame additions now in course of erection are just outside the zone by a narrow margin.

This is seriously interfering with a readjustment of Connellsville's insurance rates. With two new pieces of motor fire apparatus soon to augment the fire fighting equipment of the city, a reduction in premiums is possible, providing no more frame structures are allowed to be put up in the fire limits.

CASE NEAR AN END

Final Testimony in Murder Trial Expected This Afternoon.

Special to The Courier.

UNIONTOWN, June 10.—It is probable that the testimony in the trial of Donato Fulmba, known as Dan Plumbo, accused of the murder of Joe Contone in Uniontown last March 18, will be concluded today. When court opened before Judge E. H. Ruppert today, District Attorney S. H. Morrow withdrew his objections made yesterday afternoon to an offer made by attorneys for the defendant in which they proposed to show certain threats made by Contone against Plumbo.

Attorney McKean stated that the counsel for the defendant yesterday afternoon had discharged and dismissed these witnesses, the district attorney having given no indication that the objection would be withdrawn.

Sparo Jasman, a restaurateur of Brownsville, was found guilty in a verdict returned to Judge J. Q. Van Swearingen today of serious charges. It was testified yesterday that Jasman, on last March 15 attacked Mary Macla, 19 years old, his night cook, and Elizabeth Morris, 17 years old, his dishwasher. The witnesses also testified that Jasman was guilty of other improprieties in his restaurant.

On prosecution by County Detective John J. Smith, Steve Aldrich was tried before Judge Van Swearingen on a charge of arson. He is alleged to have attempted to burn down the home of Mrs. William Barrow, formerly Mrs. Dorothy E. Crawford, in South Union township, opposite the farmhouse of J. R. Barnes on the road from Hopwood to the street car stop. The attempt to burn the house is said to have been made last April 14.

GETS A PATENT

South Connellsville Man Invents Footrest for Radiators.

A. O. Anderson of South Connellsville has been granted a patent upon a unique device—a footrest for steam and hot water radiators.

The device is simple and its usefulness is apparent. A short latticed iron footrest, the length of the radiator, is attached by means of rods which run up and hook over the spaces between the units of the radiator. It can be readily and quickly attached and just as easily removed. It provides a rest for persons who desire a place to put their feet when sitting close to the radiators on cold days.

ENGINE, BALANCED ON ONE RAIL, TIES UP THE SHEEPSKIN

Unusual Derailment Gives Wrecking Crew a Serious Problem.

PASSENGERS ARE TRANSFERRED

Gangs Work for Hours in Order to Once More Restore Traffic Between This Point and Fairmont; Derailment Occurs Near Cheat Haven.

Baltimore & Ohio railroad wreck crews, accustomed to all sorts of derailments and smashups, faced one of the most difficult problems in the history of the Connellsville division yesterday afternoon when Engine 2816 jumped the tracks on the trestle at Ada, south of Smithfield. It ran along the tracks for several rail lengths and was brought to a stop by Engineer Foye on the verge of toppling over into the gully.

The big locomotive smashed the ties both inside and outside of the rails and straddled a single rail, making it a herculean task to put it back upon the tracks again. It had not been righted at noon today, despite the efforts of the wreckers. Traffic on the Sheepshead branch was delayed, passengers on all trains being compelled to transfer past the blocked trestle.

The wreck crew faces a ticklish proposition for if too much weight is put upon one side in jacking up the big engine, it may topple over into the gully.

The train was in charge of Engineer Foye, who runs out of Connellsville, and Conductor Sutton. It was backing across the trestle when the derailment occurred. Engineer Foye brought it to a stop with the emergency brake, otherwise it might have gone over the edge.

GETS A HELPER

Assistant to Clerk Goes on Duty at the City Hall.

Miss Berna Bryner, a graduate of the commercial department of the high school this year, has been employed by the city as extra city clerk and stenographer. She assumed her new duties several days ago.

A member of council stated today that Miss Bryner probably would be retained permanently, at a salary to be fixed by council at its next meeting. The accumulation of clerical work in the city office is given as the reason for the employment of more help.

The city pays $100 a month to the city clerk and $25 a month to the Superintendent of Accounts and Finance, making a total of $125 a month for keeping the books. The addition of a stenographer will increase this amount. No assistants were necessary during the first two years of the city administration.

City Clerk Blier said today that so long as he is assistant to the Superintendent of Accounts and Finance he is authorized to employ an extra clerk whenever conditions make it necessary.

BRUSH TEETH CORRECTLY

The right way to brush the teeth is to hold the bristles upright. In this way the crevices, as well as the surfaces are thoroughly cleansed, provided a few drops of hyclorite in a glass of water are used.

Particles of food which invite germs and microbes get into the tiny crevices. Hyclorite reaches every crevice, kills the germs and makes the mouth and breath sweet and clean.

You surely must use hyclorite and avoid decay of teeth. Rinse and gargle with this very satisfying and effective mouth wash and you will escape throat troubles and other germ diseases.

Dentists are urging the use of hyclorite because it is such a pure, safe and remarkably effective antiseptic. It cools and soothes, cleanses and heals and is very economical. Hyclorite can be obtained from any druggist.

SOISSON THEATRE.

"HUMAN DRIFTWOOD"—The story of "Human Driftwood" is that of a young bachelor in New York who becomes infatuated with a girl of the crooks who leads him to a life of crime. As two of the gang were operating on the safe, Hendricks came in. Myra was startled, and as Hendricks and her lover of the underworld came to a fight, Myra picked a revolver and shooting to kill Hendricks. Killed her own lover. Years later Hendricks is sent for by Father Harrington in Alaska to assist him in cleaning up the vile conditions existing there. Myra now had a dance hall there, and was breaking in her niece, Velma, to the life of a dancer, when Hendricks arrived. He did not recognize Myra although she recognized him. When Velma fell in love with Hendricks, and the town bully who had "struck it rich" in the gold fields, Myra sold Velma for gold, a fight ensued between Hendricks and the bully, in which the bully met with a frightful death, being killed by Hendricks together, and paying the way for true love to take its course. "A Gentle Volunteer," is a three reel Southern Decoration Day drama featuring Ben Wilson and Dorothy Phillips. It is a story of an old man who wandering up the mountain side stops to rest beneath a pine tree. He finds a grave and looking at the stone it brings back memories of his young days. It is a type of photograph much in demand at the present time and its settings are historically correct and should appeal to all. "All Over a Stocking" is a Nestor comedy with Eddie Lyons and Betty Compton in the cast. Mrs. Newberry is very extravagant and hubby refuses to give her money to buy stockings. He later buys her a pair as a surprise. She sees the stenographer with a pal rot the same kind and immediately becomes suspicious. When he goes home he runs into a tornado in the person of his wife but it is all cleared up. Monday Joan Sothern and Howard Estabrook are featured in the first episode of the interesting serial of mystery, "The Mystery of Myra," also "Mutt and Jeff" cartoon comedy.

gina and it is a case of love at first sight. When Ralph tells his uncle that Virginia is about to marry him John for the first time in his life is tempted. He deliberates on how he can get rid of Ralph. He is in possession of a letter written by Ralph's mother before her death. The letter is of three pages and by omitting the second it reads that Ralph's mother died of hereditary insanity and that Ralph is subject to this affliction. John not wishing to marry Virginia with this taint returns north and Virginia is heartbroken. Some time later John confesses. Virginia goes in search of Ralph and finds him before he has gone insane from brooding. Monday, "The Snowbird," a five part Metro production, in which Mabel Taliaferro is starred, and Edward Carowe, the director, is featured, will be presented. ## BIG CARNIVAL COMING

Con T. Kennedy's Big Attractions Booked on West Side.

Profiting from past experience, and determined to give the public a show that will please the most critical, Con T. Kennedy, spent a great deal of time and money, building up the wonderful amusement enterprise, which will be in this city during the week of June 26. There have been other shows of this kind here before, but after the Con T. Kennedy shows come, it is predicted that everyone will say they are the best ever, and far and away better than anything ever here before. The show Mr. Kennedy has this season is an improvement over the 1915 aggregation, which was admitted by competent critics, to be the best in the United States. The disastrous railroad wreck which damaged the Con T. Kennedy shows so badly last November, brought out the wonderful ability of the big showman, who has replaced all the destroyed equipment with new and better paraphernalia. The Con T. Kennedy shows are like the best circuses now in this country and have as complete a staff and as many conveniences for its patrons as the biggest circuses. The show travels in its own train of 35 cars, carries its own electric lighting plant and cook house, has ten Pullman sleepers for the show people, special built cars for the stock and wild animals, and exceptionally long and strong flat cars. Nothing was overlooked, and railroad officials freely state that a better show train never rolled over any tracks in this country. A wonderful system has been devised by Mr. Kennedy, and everyone on the show has his particular place and duty to perform. It is like a well oiled engine, with every part working in perfect harmony and the people are like a big family, with everyone trying their best to do what they can for the show and one another. There is an air of cleanliness about this show which makes it the premier of all outdoor amusement enterprises. The carnival spirit always prevails on the midway and it is a constant round of fun and pleasure for those who attend. There is much to be seen and heard, and there is such a diversified list of attractions that the most particular can and is pleased. The above company show here under the auspices of the New Haven Fire Department.

A PENSION PLAN

Wells-Fargo Employees to Benefit Under New System.

Manager George R. Zimmerman of the local Wells-Fargo office has been notified of a new benefit and pension plan which the company made effective for its employees on June 1, the provisions of which are most generous.

One of the provisions is that any employee six months or more in the service will receive pay if incapacitated for work in an accident occurring while he is on duty. The compensation for injuries suffered while on duty are considerably greater. Another provision gives full pay for a month and half pay for an additional number of months—according to the terms of service—in the event of the death of an employee, a revision in the employee pension plan makes the minimum payment $30 a month. Hitherto there was no stipulated minimum.

Facts Versus Fallacies

FACT is a real state of things. FALLACY is an apparently genuine but really illogical statement or argument.

REPORTS from Ohio show that Prohibitionists have been embarrassed with their efforts, through FALLACIES, to have a ban placed upon alcoholic beverages in that State. Ohio's most eminent men have come to the front with FACTS that explode the FALLACIOUS stories being circulated for Prohibition. Note these opinions:

FORMER President Taft: "Nothing is more foolish, nothing more at variance with sound policy, than to enact a law which, by reason of conditions surrounding a community, is incapable of enforcement."

JUDGE Rufus B. Smith, of Cincinnati: "If the use of intoxicating liquors is immoral, why prohibit merely its manufacture and sale? It is a purchase and consumption of liquor should also be made an offense, and every man who drinks be punished. Prohibitionists should not hesitate to go where their logic takes them. The contention that because a few men abuse the use of liquor all shall be forbidden its use is equally untenable. Because my neighbor misbehaves is no reason why I should be locked up with him."

DR. Ralph Reed, physician and surgeon of wide reputation, Cincinnati: "Careful study of the whole Prohibition movement from the days of Neal Dow to the present—its long succession of failures, its stimulation of law breaking and illicit sale of the worst sort of alcoholic liquors—causes me to view with intense concern renewed attempts at extending this pernicious doctrine."

DR. Washington Gladden, noted pulpit orator and philosopher, of Columbus: "Could a Prohibition law be enforced? I have frequently put this question to my prohibitory friends, and they all, with one accord, confess that it could not."

THE FALLACY of Prohibition is best shown by the FACT that whenever tried it has proven a failure, because it is neither just nor practical. And the quotations above, from men of affairs, make this FACT the more convincing!

CHAPTER XVI Flood Tide

Public opinion, skillfully formed upon models fashioned in Mayor Cortwright's municipal laboratory, dealt handsomely with the little group of widely-heralded visitors—the "congressional committee." When it was whispered about, some days before the auspicious arrival, that the visiting lawmakers wished for no public demonstration of welcome, it was received, both in the city council and in the Commercial club, that the wish should be rigidly respected.

Hence, after the farewell banquet at the Commercial club, at which even the toasts had ignored the official mission of Mayor Cortwright's guests, stinging curiosity still frustrated itself, said nothing and did nothing until the train had stormed out on the beginning of its steep climb to War Arrow pass. Then the barriers went down in less than half an hour after the departure of the visitors, the Spillertown gate was besieged by eager hunters, and the Metropolitan lobby and lobby were thronged and buzzing like the compartments of an anxious beehive.

Harlan stood the pressure at the newspaper office as long as he could. Then he slipped out the back way. There was a light in Brouillard's office on the sixth floor of the Niagara building, and thither he went, hoping against hope, for latterly the chief of the reclamation service had been more than usually reticent.

"What do you know, Brouillard?" was the form his demand took.

"Go to Cortwright," suggested the engineer. "He's your man."

"Just come from him, and I couldn't get a thing there except his admission that he is buying instead of selling."

"Well, what more do you want? Haven't you any imagination?"

"Plenty of it and, by God, I'm going to use it unless you put it to sleep! Tell me a few correlative things, Brouillard, and I'll make a name like going away, for it true that you've had orders from Washington within the past few days to cut your force on the dam one-half?"

The engineer was playing with the paperknife, absently marking little circles and ellipses on his desk blotter, and the ash on his cigar gave a full quarter of an inch before he replied:

"Not for publication, Harlan, I'm sorry to say."

"But you have the order?"

"Yes."

"Good. Then I'll ask you only one question, and if you answer it at all I know you'll tell me the truth: Are you, individually, buying or selling on the real estate exchange?"

Brouillard did take time, plenty of it. Harlan was a student of men, but his present excitement was against him. Otherwise he would have interpreted differently the sudden hardening of the jaw muscles when Brouillard spoke.

"I'm buying, Harlan; when I sell it is only to buy again."

The newspaper man rose and held out his hand.

"You're a man and a brother, Brouillard, and I'm your friend for life. I'm going to stay until you give me the high sign to crawl out on the bank, is that asking too much?"

"No. If the time ever comes when I have anything to say, I'll say it to you. But don't lose sight of the 'it' and don't lean too hard on me. I'm a mighty uncertain quantity these days, Harlan, and that's the truest thing I've said since you butted in. Good night."

Mirapolis awoke to a full sense of its opportunities on the morning following the departure of its distinguished guests. By ten o'clock it was the talk of the lobbies, the club, and the exchanges that the reclamation service was already abandoning the work on the great dam. One-half of the workmen were to be discharged at once, and doubtless the other half would follow as soon as the orders could come from Washington.

Appealed to by a mob of anxious inquirers, Brouillard did not deny the fact of the discharge, and thereupon the city went mad in a furor of speculative excitement in comparison with which the orgy of the gold discoverers paled into insignificance. "Curexchanged sprang into being in the Metropolitan lobby, in the court of the Niagara building, and at a dozen street corners on the avenue. Word went to the placers, and by noon the miners had left their sluice-boxes and were pouring into town to buy options at prices that would have staggered the wildest plunger elsewhere, or at any other time.

Brouillard closed his desk at one o'clock and went to fight his way through the street pandemonium to Douglas'. At a table in the rear room he found David Massingale, his long, white beard tucked into the closely-buttoned collar of his coat to be out of the way of the flying knife and fork, while he gave a little imitation of a man begrudging every second of time wasted in stopping the hunger gap.

"Looks Like I Need a Janitor to Look After My Upper Story, Don't it?"

Brouillard took the opposite chair and was grimly amused at the length of time that elapsed before Massingale realized his presence.

"Fifty a man has to stop to eat on a day like this, isn't it, Mr. Massingale?" he laughed; and then: "How is Steve?"

Massingale nodded. "The boy's coming along all right now. They're saying on the street that you're letting out half of your men—that so?"

Brouillard laughed again. "Yes, it's true. Have you been doing something in real estate this morning, Mr. Massingale?"

"All I could," mumbled the old man between mouthfuls. "But I can't do much. If it ain't one thing, it's another. 'Bout as soon as I got that tangle with the Red Butte smelter straightened out, the railroad hit me."

"How was that?" queried Brouillard, with quickening interest coming alive at a bound.

"Some old song, no care; try and get 'em tomorrow, and tomorrow it'll be next day, and next day it'll be the day after. Looks like they don't want to haul any freight out o' here."

"I see," said Brouillard, and truly he saw much more than David Massingale did. Then "No shipments means no money for you, and more delay; and delay happens to be the one thing you can't stand. When do those orders of yours fall due?"

Massingale was troubled, and his fine old face showed it plainly.

"I ain't much of a man to bother when I've got the woods afore myself," he answered slowly. "But I don't know why I shouldn't yip a little to you if I feel like it. Today is the last day on my notes. I been to see Hardwick at the bank, and he gave me the ultimatum good and cold."

One of Douglas' rear-room luxuries was a portable telephone for every guest of the table. Brouillard made a sign to the waiter, and the desk set was brought to him. It David Massingale recognized the number asked for, he paid no attention; and, since a man may spend his life digging holes in the ground and still retain the instincts of a gentleman—if he happens to have been born with them—he was equally oblivious to the disjunct half of the telephone conversation he might have listened to.

"Hello! Is that Beyer-Niquola National?" This is Brouillard. Can you give me my present figure? Not more than that? Oh, yes; you say the Hillman check is in; I had overlooked it. All right, thank you."

When the waiter had removed the desk set, the engineer leaned toward his table companion.

"Mr. Massingale, I'm going to ask you to tell me frankly what kind of a deal it was you made with Cortwright and the bank people."

"It was the biggest tom-fool razzle that any livin' live man out of a lunatic asylum ever went into," confessed the prisoner of fate. "I was to stock the 'Susan' for half a million—oh, she's worth it, every dollar of it; you might say she's the ore in the right now—this in deference to Brouillard's brow-knitting of surprise. "They was to put in a hundred thousand cash, and I was to put in the mine and the ore on the dump, just as she stood."

The engineer nodded and Massingale went on.

"I was to have two-thirds of the stock and they was to have one-third. The hundred thousand for development went to get at the bank, on my notes, because I was president and the biggest stockholder, with John Wes, as I'd called him. Then, to protect the bank according to law, they said, we'd put the whole bunch of stock—mine and the bank—into escrow in the hands of Judge Williams. When the notes was paid, the judge'd hand the stock back to us."

"Just a moment," interrupted Brouillard. "Did you sign those notes personally, or as president of the new company?"

"Both where they laid for me," said the old man shamelessly. "Right there is where John Wes' one-dollar-a-share body-pump stuff was sopping up must 'a' foisted me plumb silly."

"So it amounts to this. You have given them a clean third of the 'Susan' for the mere privilege of borrowing one hundred thousand dollars on your own paper. And if you don't pay, you lose the remaining two-thirds as well."

"That's about the way it stacks up to a sober man. Looks like I needed a janitor to look after my upper story, don't it? And I reckon mebbe I do."

"One thing more," pressed the relentless questioner. "Did you really handle the hundred-thousand-dollar development fund yourself, Mr. Massingale?"

"Well, no; not exactly. Ten thousand dollars of what they called a 'contingent fund' was put in my name, but the treasurer handled most of it—naturally, we hold a stock company."

Brouillard took out his pencil and began to make figures on the back of the menu card. He knew the equipment of the "Little Susan," and his specialty was the making of estimates. Hence he was able, to say, after a minute or two of figuring:

"It's a bad business any way you at it. What you have really got to do yourself out of the deal is the ten thousand-dollar deposit to your personal account, and nothing more; and they'll probably try to make you a debtor for that. Taking that amount and a fair estimate of the company's expenditures in round numbers, which is fairly chargeable to the company's assets as a whole—they still owe you about fifty thousand of the original hundred thousand they were to put in. If there were time—but you say this is the last day."

"The last half of the last day," Massingale amended.

"That being the case, there is no help for it; you'll have to take your medicine and pay the notes. Do that, take an iron-clad receipt from the bank—I'll write it out for you—and get the stock released. After that, we'll give them a wild for the thirty-three and a third per cent they have practically stolen from you."

The old man's face, reminding now of his daughter's, was a picture of dismayed incredulity.

"I reckon you're forgettin' that I ain't got money enough to lift one edge o' them notes," he said gently.

Brouillard had found a piece of blank paper in his pocket and was rapidly writing the "iron-clad" receipt.

"No, I hadn't forgotten I have something over a hundred thousand dollars lying idle in the bank. You'll take it and pay the notes."

It was a bolt out of a clear sky for the old man tottering on the brink of his fourth pit of disaster, and he evinced his emotion—and the tone of a key-upped nerve—by dropping his lifted coffee cup with a crash into his plate. The little accident was helpful in its way—it made a diversion—and by the time the wreck was repaired speech was possible.

"Are you—are you plumb sure you can spare it?" asked the debtor anxiously. And then: "I can't seem to sort o' surround it—all in a bunch, that way. I knowed J. Wesley had me down; the 'Susan' the only piece o' real money in this whole blamed free-for-all, and he knows it."

After they had made their way through the excited sidewalk exchanges to the bank, and Brouillard had written his check, the old man with the miraculously-sent bit of rescue paper in his hand, hesitated.

"There's one thing—and I've got to spit it out before it's everlastingly too late. See here, Victor Brouillard—Amy likes you—thinks a heap of you; a plumb blind man could see that. But say, that little girl o' mine has just naturally got to have a free head when it comes to puttin' up, and she won't never have it she finds out about this. You ain't allowin' to use it on her, Victor?"

Brouillard laughed.

"I'll make a hedging bet and break even with you, Mr. Massingale," he said. "That check is drawn to my order, and I have indorsed it. Let me have it again and I'll get the cash for you. In that way only the two of us can know anything about the transaction; and if I promise to keep the secret from Miss Amy, you must promise to keep it from Mr. J. Wesley Cortwright. Will you say it off with me that way?—until you've made the turn on the ore sales?"

David Massingale shook hands on it, with more gratitude colored this time with a hearty imprecation. "Dad burn you, Victor Brouillard, you're a man—over single million of you!" he burst out. But Brouillard shook his head gravely.

"No, Mr. Massingale, I'm the little yellow dog you mentioned a while back," he asserted, and then he went to get the money.

Left alone in the small retiring room of the bank where the business had been transacted, David Massingale took the sheet of bank notes from his pocket with trembling hands, fondling it as a miser might. Twice the old man made as if he would turn toward the door of egress, and the light in his grey-blue eyes was the rekindling flame of a passion long denied. But in the end he thrust the tempting sheet back into the inner pocket and went resolutely to the cashier's counter window, finding Sobermorn, the president, sitting at the cashier's desk.

"I've come to take up your notes o' mine with John Wes' name on 'em," Massingale began, pulling out the "iron-clad" receipt of redemption money.

"Here you are, Mr. Massingale. Brought the cash, did you? The 'Little Susan' has begun to pan out, has it? I didn't know you had commenced shipping ore yet?"

"We haven't," David Massingale made the admission and regretted it in one and the same breath.

"You've borrowed to meet these notes?" queried the president, looking up quickly. "That won't do. We can't afford to lose an old customer that way. What's the matter with our money? Doesn't it look good to you any more?"

Massingale stammered out something about Cashier Hardwick's peremptory demand of a few hours earlier, but he was not permitted to finish.

"Of course, it is all right from Hardwick's point of view. He was merely looking out for the maturing paper. How much more time will you need to enable you to get returns from your shipments? Sixty days? All right, you needn't make out now notes; I'll endorse the extension on the back of those, and I'll undertake to get Cortwright's approval myself. No; not a word, Mr. Massingale. As long as you're borrowing, you must be loyal and borrow of us. Good afternoon. Come again when we can help you out."

"You Borrowed to Meet These Notes?"

David Massingale turned away, flustered and confused beyond the power of speech. When the mist of astonishment cleared he found himself in the street with the thick web of bank notes still in his pocket. Suddenly, out of the limbo into which two years of laborious discipline and self-denial had pushed him, stalked the demon of the ruling passion, mighty, overpowering, unconquerable. The familiar, almost sighted, danced before Massingale's eyes, and there was a drumming in his ears like the fall of many waters. But above the clamor rose the insistent voice of the tempter, and the voice was at once a command and an entreaty, a gnawing hunger and a parching thirst.

"By gosh! I'd like to try that old system o' mine just one more time!" he muttered. "All it takes is money enough to follow it up and stay. And I've got the money. Besides, didn't Brouillard say I was to get an extension if I could?"

He grabbed at his coat to be sure that the packet was still there, took two steps toward the bank, stopped, turned as if in the grasp of an invisible but irresistible captor, and moved away, like a man walking in his sleep, toward the lower avenue.

It was the doorway of Haley's place, the Monte Carlo of the Niagara, that finally halted him. Here the struggle was so force that the bartender, who knew him, named it sickness and led the stuken one to a card table in the public bar-room and fetched him a drink. A single swallow of whisky turned the scale. Massingale rose, tossed a coin to the bar, and passed quickly to the rear, where a pair of balze doors opened silently and engulfed him.

HOLLAND PUSHES CLOCKS AHEAD TO SAVE DAYLIGHT

Population Arises An Hour Earlier 'And Also Retires Hour Earlier Now.

THE HAGUE, Netherlands, June 9.—Holland expects to save approximately $2,000,000 annually through its new "summer time" or daylight-saving scheme, which went into effect at midnight of April 30. Parliament's act, comprising one short article, was adopted by both Chambers with only a few minutes' discussion, and 600,000 people are rising an hour earlier and retiring an hour earlier. Aside from the financial gain, much is expected to result in the way of beneficial influence on the nation's health. The change was effected with a minimum of inconvenience, and there were few late-comers in schools and factories on the first morning of the new regime. By a curious oversight, the high clock of the Palace of Peace at The Hague was seen to be still indicating the old-time on May-day morning.

The one industrial sphere in which objections are raised is the agricultural world, and a number of farmers in Friesland and elsewhere are evincing an inclination to regulate their activities by the old time. Earlier milking, for instance, is not in the interests of the milk yield, while the harvesting season, the earlier the weather, will, it is declared, be working harm, as mowing and other operations are then impossible owing to the dampness of the early morning, while the afternoons will be too short. Such obstacles are, however, not expected to prove insurmountable, and on the whole the daylight-saving act is voted a success.

PILOT HERZOG IS PLEASED WITH THE REDLEGS' HARMONY

Esprit de Corps Among the Men is Bringing Welcome Success.

MEN HAVE HAPPY FAMILY NOW

Red Leader Used Mailed Fist During Period of Discussion and is Getting Results Now; Former Enemies Are Now His Friends; Going Good.

By JAMES JEROME

"The success of the Reds is the outcome of harmony and the finest kind of esprit de corps among the men," said Charlie Herzog, shortly after he had recovered consciousness from a terrible blow above the ear by a bullet-like ball thrown by Ivy Wingo. Wingo, a member of the Red team, was so angry over the accident that he threw the ball.

Herzog, a former organizer of the Red team, was so angry over the accident that he threw the ball. He is now a member of the Red team and is getting results now. Former enemies are now his friends and are going good.

Hal Chase, who had trouble and sometimes was obstreperous with every manager he ever had, in the Red team, is now a member of the Red team and is getting results now. Former enemies are now his friends and are going good.

"Hal, I'm going to make an outfielder of you and put Mollwitz on first," Mollwitz is a good first baseman and can hit, and with both of you in the outfield order we will be strong in batting."

"All right, Charlie," replied Chase. "I'll do anything you say, and I think the idea is a good one."

Garry Herrmann is highly pleased with his young manager, as the big new park in Cincinnati is drawing great crowds of satisfied and happy fans. Discussing the big change in the club Herzog said:

"The first thing I did was to break up cliques and put an iron heel down on drinking and late hours. I had to take harsh measures, and I made many enemies among players, but the very ones whom I disciplined are traveling the straight road, and are thinking me for it and they are the best friends I have."

"In my troublous days," continued Herzog, "the best little player on the team was the most loyal to me. He was little Eddie Grob, as game a little fellow and as hard a hitter as any of them. Besides, he is a fast fielder. I made a third baseman out of him, but in a reconstruction of the team I could play him at third, second or short."

Herzog, besides drawing a fat sum from Garry Herrmann and earning every dollar of it, has a big acreage of cantaloupes in Ridgely, Maryland. They call him the "cantaloupe king."

SELLS HIS FIFTEENTH CAR.

J. H. Rhodes of the West Side is Making a Good Record.

"Every time I put an ad in The Courier I sell an automobile." That is the verdict of J. H. Rhodes of the West Side Garage. He has just closed for the sale of a 7-passenger Paige touring car to Mrs. A. J. Templeton.

During the present season Mr. Rhodes has sold 15 Paige cars in Connelville. He attributes his success largely to the advertising campaign he has carried on. "A good car and a good advertising medium form a combination hard to beat," is his verdict.
